8th International Bielefeld Conference

Academic Library and Information Services:

New Paradigms for the Digital Age

The 8th International Bielefeld Conference will be held from 7 – 9 February 2006 at the Convention Centre ("Stadthalle") in Bielefeld, Germany. The conference which takes place since 1992 has become an internationally almost unique and open forum for librarians and university managers to think beyond the daily routine and operative business, and to look beyond their own institutional environments, discussing advantages and disadvantages of various concepts and approaches.

The upcoming conference concentrates on the following topics:

- National and International Strategies for Academic Libraries and Information Services
- Strategic Planning for Library and Information Service Managers
- Innovative Information Services and Future Challenges for Libraries
- Commercial Internet Services and how they affect Academic Libraries

Renowned speakers from universities and enterprise sectors will contribute international views and experiences.

The programme and further details are available on the Internet:

<http://conference.ub.uni-bielefeld.de>

The conference will be accompanied by a representative commercial exhibition. Leading suppliers of communication technology and related software, information service providers and representatives of well-known publishing houses will be presenting and participating in discussions.

Circa 500 participants from Europe and overseas are expected to take part. The conference will be held in German and English. The attendance fee is 50 Euro. The conference is organized by Bielefeld University Library.
